Digesta 50.4.1. en 50.4.18.⁴

Dig. 50.4.1.

2. Personalia civilia sunt munera defensionis civitatis, id est ut syndicus fiat: legatio ad census accipiendum vel patrimonium: scribatus: kamyllasia: annonae ac similiarum cura: praediorumque publicorum: frumenti comparandi: aquae ductus: equorum circensium spectacula: publicae viae munitiones: arcae frumentariae: calefactiones thermarum: annonae divisio et quaecumque aliae curae istis sunt similes. Ex his enim, quae rettulimus, cetera etiam per leges cuiusque civitatis ex consuetudine longa intellegi potuerunt.

Personal employments are such as relate to the defence of a city, that is to say, such as may be made by the civil magistrate, for example, the collection of taxes, or as has been stated with reference to patrimonial employments, supervision of beasts of burden with a view to the supply of provisions and other things of this kind; as well as care of the public lands, aqueducts, horses, and chariot-races; repairs of highways and warehouses; the heating of baths, the distribution of food, and all duties of this description. For from what we have stated, any other matters which, by long-continued custom, have been established in the different cities, can be readily understood.

3. Illud tenendum est generaliter personale quidem munus esse, quod corporibus labore cum sollicitudine animi ac vigilantia sollemniter extitit, patrimonii vero, in quo sumptus maxime postulatur.

A personal employment is generally understood to be one which is accompanied with manual labor, care, and diligence. A patrimonial employment, however, is one in which expense is especially requisite.

Dig. 50.4.18.

Aurelius Arcadius Charisius magister libellorum libro singulari de muneribus civilis Arcadius Charisius, On Civil Employments.

pr. Munerum civilium triplex divisio est: nam quaedam munera personalia sunt, quaedam patrimoniorum dicuntur, alia mixta.

There are three kinds of civil employments, for some are called personal, others are styled patrimonial, and others are mixed.

1. Personalia sunt, quae animi provisione et corporalis laboris intentione sine aliquo gerentis detrimento perpetrantur, veluti tutela vel cura, kalendarii quoque curatio.

Personal employments are those which are carried on by the application of the mind, and the exertion of corporeal labor, without resulting in any detriment to the person who administers them; as, for instance, guardianship or curatorship.

2. Et quaestura in aliqua civitate inter honores non habetur, sed personale munus est.

The keeping of accounts and the collection of money in any town is not considered an honorable employment but a personal one.

3. Tironum sive equorum productio et si qua alia animalia necessario producenda vel res pervehendae sive persequendae sunt vel pecunia fiscalis sive annona vel vestis, personae munus est.

The conducting of recruits, or horses, or any other animals necessary for the transportation or pursuit of public property, or of money belonging to the Treasury, or of provisions or clothing, is a personal employment.

4. Cursus vehicularis sollicitudo, item angariarum praebitio personale munus est.

The supervision of posts and couriers is a personal employment.

5. Cura quoque emendi frumenti olei (nam harum specierum curatores, quos sitwnas et elaiwnas appellant, creari moris est) inter personalia munera in quibusdam civitatibus numerantur: et calefactio publici balinei, si ex redditibus alicuius civitatis curatori pecunia subministratur.

The care of purchasing grain and oil (as it is customary to appoint persons for duties of this kind, who are called purveyors of grain and oil), is, in some towns, included among personal employments, as well as the duty of heating the public baths, when the money provided by the official in charge is obtained from the revenues of any municipality.

6. Sed et cura custodiendi aquae ductus personalibus muneribus adgregatur.

The preservation of aqueducts is included in personal employments.

7. Irenarchae quoque, qui disciplinae publicae et corrigendis moribus praeficiuntur: sed et qui ad faciendas vias eligi solent, cum nihil de proprio patrimonio in hoc munus conferant: item episcopi, qui praesunt pani et ceteris venalibus rebus, quae civitatum populis ad cotidianum victum usui sunt, personalibus muneribus funguntur.

Irenarchs are officials who are appointed to maintain public discipline and the preservation of morals. Those who are selected for the construction of highways, when they can contribute nothing out of their own property for this purpose, along with those who are appointed to supervise the sale of bread and other provisions necessary to the daily sustenance of the people of towns, administer personal employments.

8. Qui annonam suscipit vel exigit vel erogat, et exactores pecuniae pro capitibus personalis muneris sollicitudinem sustinent.

Persons who have charge of either the collection or distribution of public provisions, and collectors of individual taxes administer personal employments.

9. Sed et curatores, qui ad colligendos civitatum publicos redditus eligi solent, personali munere subiugantur.

Officials who are usually chosen for the collection of the public revenues of towns exercise a personal employment.

10. Hi quoque, qui custodes aedium vel archeotae vel logographi vel tabularii vel xenoparochi (ut in quibusdam civitatibus) vel limenarchae vel curatores ad extruenda vel reficienda aedificia publica sive palatia sive navalia vel mansiones destinantur, si tamen pecuniam publicam in operis fabricam erogent, et qui faciendis vel reficiendis navibus, ubi usus exigit, praeponuntur, muneribus personalibus adstringuntur.

Those also who are the guardians of temples, or who have charge of the archives; writers of orations and book-keepers; those who furnish entertainment to strangers, as in certain cities; those who have superintendence of harbors; officials charged with the construction or repair of public buildings, whether palaces, or naval arsenals, or such as are destined for military quarters, who expend the public money in the erection of buildings, or for the construction or repair of ships, when this is necessary, administer personal employments.

11. Camelasia quoque similiter personale munus est: nam ratione habita et alimentorum et camelorum certa pecunia camelariis dari debet, ut solo corporis ministerio obligentur. Hos ex albi ordine liberari, nisi sola laesi et inutilis corporis et infirmitate, specialiter sit expressum.

The driving of camels is also a personal employment, for a certain amount should be given to the camel-drivers for the support of themselves and their camels, and an account kept of the same, so that they will only be compelled to furnish manual labor. These should be called according to the order in which they are registered, and should not be released by any excuse, unless it is expressly shown that they are suffering from some corporeal injury, or weakness.

12. Legati quoque, qui ad sacrarium principis mittuntur, quia viaticum, quod legativum dicitur, interdum solent accipere, sed et nycostrategi et pistrinorum curatores personale munus ineunt.

Messengers who are despatched to the Emperor sometimes receive their necessary travelling expenses, but the officers of the night-watch and the superintendents of mills administer personal employments.

13. Defensores quoque, quos Graeci syndicos appellant, et qui ad certam causam agendam vel defendendam eliguntur, laborem personalis muneris adgrediuntur.

The defenders also, whom the Greeks call syndics, and who are selected for the prosecution or defence of some case, exercise personal employment.

14. Iudicandi quoque necessitas inter munera personalia habetur.

The duty of rendering decisions is also classed among personal employments.

15. Si aliquis fuerit electus, ut compellat eos, qui prope viam publicam possident, sternere viam, personale munus est.

When anyone is chosen to compel persons to construct pavements in front of the public highways, this employment is personal.

16. Pari modo qui acceptandis sive suscipiendis censualibus professionibus destinantur, ad personalis muneris sollicitudinem animum intendunt.

In like manner, those who are appointed for the collection of taxes perform the functions relating to a personal employment.

17. Mastigophori quoque, qui agonothetas in certaminibus comitantur, et scribae magistratus personali muneri serviunt.

The officials who accompany the contestants in games, and the clerks of magistrates, also discharge the functions of personal employments.

18. Patrimoniorum sunt munera, quae sumptibus patrimonii et damnis administrantis expediuntur.

Patrimonial employments are those which are administered at the expense of the estate, and to the loss of the person who exercises them.

19. Elemporia et pratura apud Alexandrinos patrimonii munus existimatur.

Among the people of Alexandria, officials who purchase oil and vegetables are considered to exercise a patrimonial employment.

20. Susceptores quoque vini per provinciam Africam patrimonii munus gerunt.

Those who collect wine throughout the province of Africa administer a patrimonial employment.

21. Patrimoniorum autem munera duplicia sunt. Nam quaedam ex his muneribus possessionibus sive patrimoniis indicuntur, veluti agminales equi vel mulae et angariae atque veredi.

Again, patrimonial employments are of a twofold nature, for some of them have reference to either possession or to patrimonies, for instance, those who furnish horses, or mules for the transportation of military supplies, or for the post.

22. Huiusmodi igitur obsequia et hi, qui neque municipes neque incolae sunt, adgnoscerere coguntur.

Therefore, persons who are neither citizens nor inhabitants of municipal towns are required to perform services of this description.

23. Sed et eos, qui faenus exercent, etsi veterani sint, tributiones eiusmodi adgnoscerere debere rescriptum est.

It has been stated in a Rescript that those who lend money at interest, even if they are veterans, must pay taxes for the privilege of doing so.

24. Ab huiusmodi muneribus neque primipilaris neque veteranus aut miles aliusve, qui privilegio aliquo subnixus, nec pontifex excusatur.

Neither veterans, nor soldiers, nor any other persons, no matter what privileges they may enjoy, and not even the pontiff himself, is exempt from employments of this kind.

25. Praeterea habent quaedam civitates praerogativam, ut hi, qui in territorio earum possident, certum quid frumenti pro mensura agri per singulos annos praebeant: quod genus collationis munus possessionis est.

Moreover, some towns have the privilege of permitting those who own land within their territory to furnish each year a certain amount of corn, in proportion to the real property which they possess; which contribution is an employment attaching to possession.

26. Mixta munera decaprotiae et icosaprotiae, ut Herennius Modestinus et notando et disputando bene et optima ratione decrevit: nam decaproti et icosaproti tributa exigentes et corporale ministerium gerunt et pro omnibus defunctorum fiscalia detrimenta resarciunt, ut merito inter mixta hoc munus numerari debeat.

Mixed employments are those in which personal and patrimonial ones are combined, as Herennius Modestinus, with the best of reasons, stated in his notes and arguments; for collectors of taxes and grain, who also perform manual labor, exercise personal employments, and make good Treasury losses from the property of deceased persons ; so that there is good reason for considering this employment as being mixed in its character.

27. Sed ea, quae supra personalia esse diximus, si hi qui funguntur ex lege civitatis suae vel more etiam de propriis facultatibus impensas faciant vel annonam exigentes desertorum praediorum damna sustineant, mixtorum definitione continebuntur.

We have, however, stated above that those who exercise personal employments, according to the laws or customs of their city, are also obliged to pay the expenses out of their own property; or if those who collect provisions should sustain any loss on account of land which remains uncultivated, these employments will also be included under the denomination of mixed.

28. Haec omnia munera, quae trifariam divisimus, una significatione comprehenduntur: nam personalia et patrimoniorum et mixta munera civilia seu publica appellantur.

All these employments, which we have divided into three classes, are included under a single signification; for personal, patrimonial, and mixed employments are designated as civil or public.

29. Sive autem personalium dumtaxat sive etiam civilium munerum immunitas alicui concedatur, neque ab annona neque ab angariis neque a veredo neque ab hospite recipiendo neque a nave neque capitatione, exceptis militibus et veteranis, excusari possunt.

Where, however, exemption from merely personal or civil employments is granted to anyone, they cannot be excused from those relating to provisions, posts, couriers, the furnishing of lodgings, the construction of ships, or the collection of personal taxes, with the exception of soldiers and veterans.

30. Magistris, qui civilium munerum vacationem habent, item grammaticis et oratoribus et medicis et philosophis, ne hospitem reciperent, a principibus fuisse immunitatem indultam et divus Vespasianus et divus Hadrianus rescripserunt.

The Divine Vespasian and the Divine Hadrian stated in a Rescript that exemption from furnishing lodgings was granted by the Emperor to teachers who were not liable to civil employment, as well as to grammarians, instructors in rhetoric, and philosophers.
